

Spot the Stretch

Which claim fits the evidence?

Goal: Students choose the one claim a short source supports, point to the exact proof, and explain how another claim stretches beyond the evidence.

- 1 Display or hand out one case page.
- 2 Teams read the source and choose A, B, or C.
- 3 One speaker points to the exact proof in the source.
- 4 Another speaker finishes: 'This source does not prove...'
- 5 Reveal the answer, discuss the tempting stretch, and record the thinking.

FOUR CHECKING MOVES

Case 1

Check who answered

Case 2

Check whether it is decided

Case 3

Check how much was tested

Case 4

Check what the plan leaves out

Important: A stretch is not always a deliberate lie. It may use real details but make the group bigger, turn an idea into a decision, or claim more than one example can show. Praise careful uncertainty as well as correct answers.

Answer Key and Debrief

Case 1: B - Check who answered

Exact proof: 46 of the 60 students who answered chose music; 14 chose quiet.

Why the other claims stretch: A changes 46 students into 46% and makes the group bigger. C claims the poll measured happiness, but it did not.

Case 2: C - Check whether it is decided

Exact proof: The notice says 'draft,' 'considering,' and 'no decision has been made.'

Why the other claims stretch: A turns the comment deadline into a start date. B turns one possible lunch into a complete ban.

Why the other claims stretch: A turns a two-point change into a claim about every student. C calls one example proof of the best study method.

Case 4: B - Check what the plan leaves out

Exact proof: The concept says 'possible' and 'idea for discussion.'

Why the other claims stretch: A invents a construction date. C invents approval, payment, and a final design.
